Honoring outstanding women

Each year the community nominates a woman to receive the prestigious Woman of the Year Award. The winner is someone who stands out for her dedication and passion to improve women's health and her community. The 2007 winner, announced by the St. John Foundation at the Moonlit Star Affaire on Dec. 8, was Gerrie Booth.

Gerrie was honored for her commitment to the community and her support of women's and children's issues. Her passion for the healthcare of this community shows through her work with the Sister Margaret Anna Cusack's* Women's Health Pavilion, A Child's Place, Altrusa, the St. John Foundation, and many other deserving charities. Gerrie has been involved with St. John Medical Center for more than 20 years.

We are a better community because she is here and better people for knowing her. Her strength and fortitude are admirable. Her kindness draws us to her. Gerrie embodies the spirit of this award, and we are privileged to honor her as our 2007 Woman of the Year. Congratulations, Gerrie!
